

IDENTITY GUIDELINES

INTRODUCTION

Our brand: how it should appear and behave in use

These branding guidelines are designed to ensure a consistent look and a consistent tone in all its communications. Our brand communicates excellence and usually serves as the first impression of our company. Each has a specific role to play, but the real magic happens when they're all used together. The following pages will help you understand our brand, what it stands for, and how to express it in the best possible way.

With any audience, in person or online.

OUR LOGO

Confident, elegant, an international, southern European aesthetic with a sense of established gravitas.

The new logo is designed to reference tradition, credibility, solidity with touch of approachable exclusivity. Associations should go to something that has existed for a substantial amount of time and gradually updated to fit modern times but without losing it's values or integrity. Inspiration comes from old established financial institutions that operates on the border of tradition but with a personal touch.

OUR WORDMARK

The logo is an essential part of a company's brand. We can all struggle with remembering names but in general we are great in remembering signs. Our logo is the face of our company. The primary visual expression that we use to identify ourselves, which means that we must be careful to use it correctly and do so consistently.

The logo is designed to convey a clear impression of who we are, it is carefully crafted to give a certain very specific association and its important that everything we do build upon this impression.

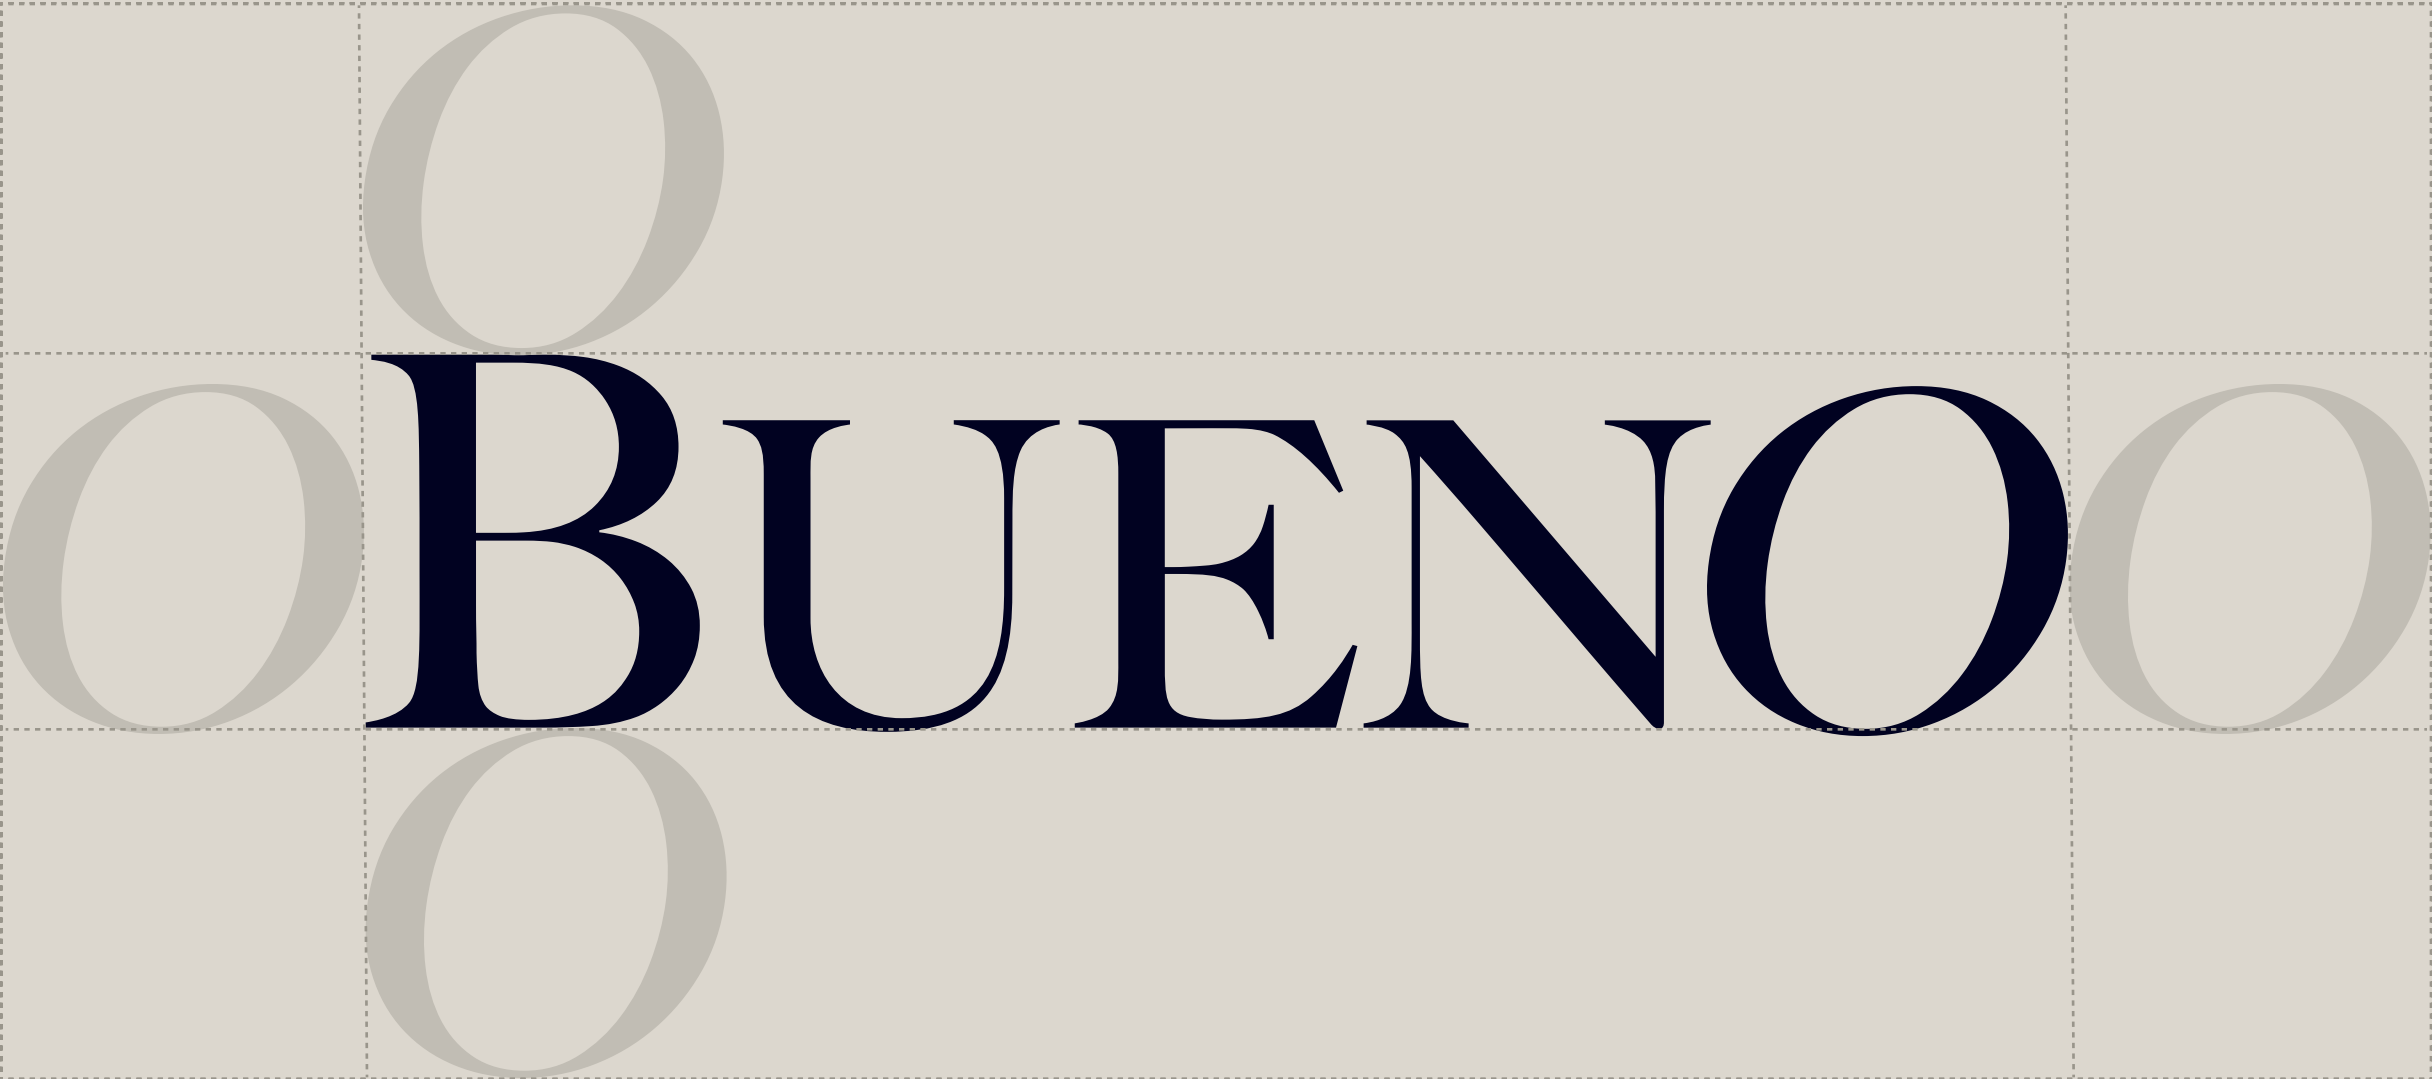

The main version we use will always be the wordmark along with the payoff to ensure we are interpreted in the correct way.

CLEAR SPACE

The dashed line around the logo defines the minimum space that must be left between the logo and any other graphic elements such as text, illustrations, busy elements in a photograph and borders.

This is to ensure that the logo retains it’s clarity and presence wherever it appears. The “O” measurements in this diagram is an easy way to measure and adjust for optimal clarity.

MAIN LOGO & PAYOFF

This is the main version of the logo for use. It incorporates our payoff and will always make the connection between our logo and what we do absolutely clear to avoid any form of confusion.

It brings an extra layer of financial heritage in it's visual association which reinforces a sense of solidity and trust.

NEGATIVE LOGO

The negative version of the logo appears in three variations, white for clarity and absolute contrast when we use less optimal surfaces or backgrounds and light grey as well as pale blue version for a more sophisticated and sober expression when needed.

MINIMUM SIZE

To ensure readability we have set some strict minimum sizes for use. These will differ between digital and analogue due to the specific requirements within each application. These are general guidelines and will have to be adjusted according to medium and channel in certain cases.

What appears clear in one setting might not be legible in another which means we will always have to take care and adjust if needed for optimal result.

OUR COLOURS

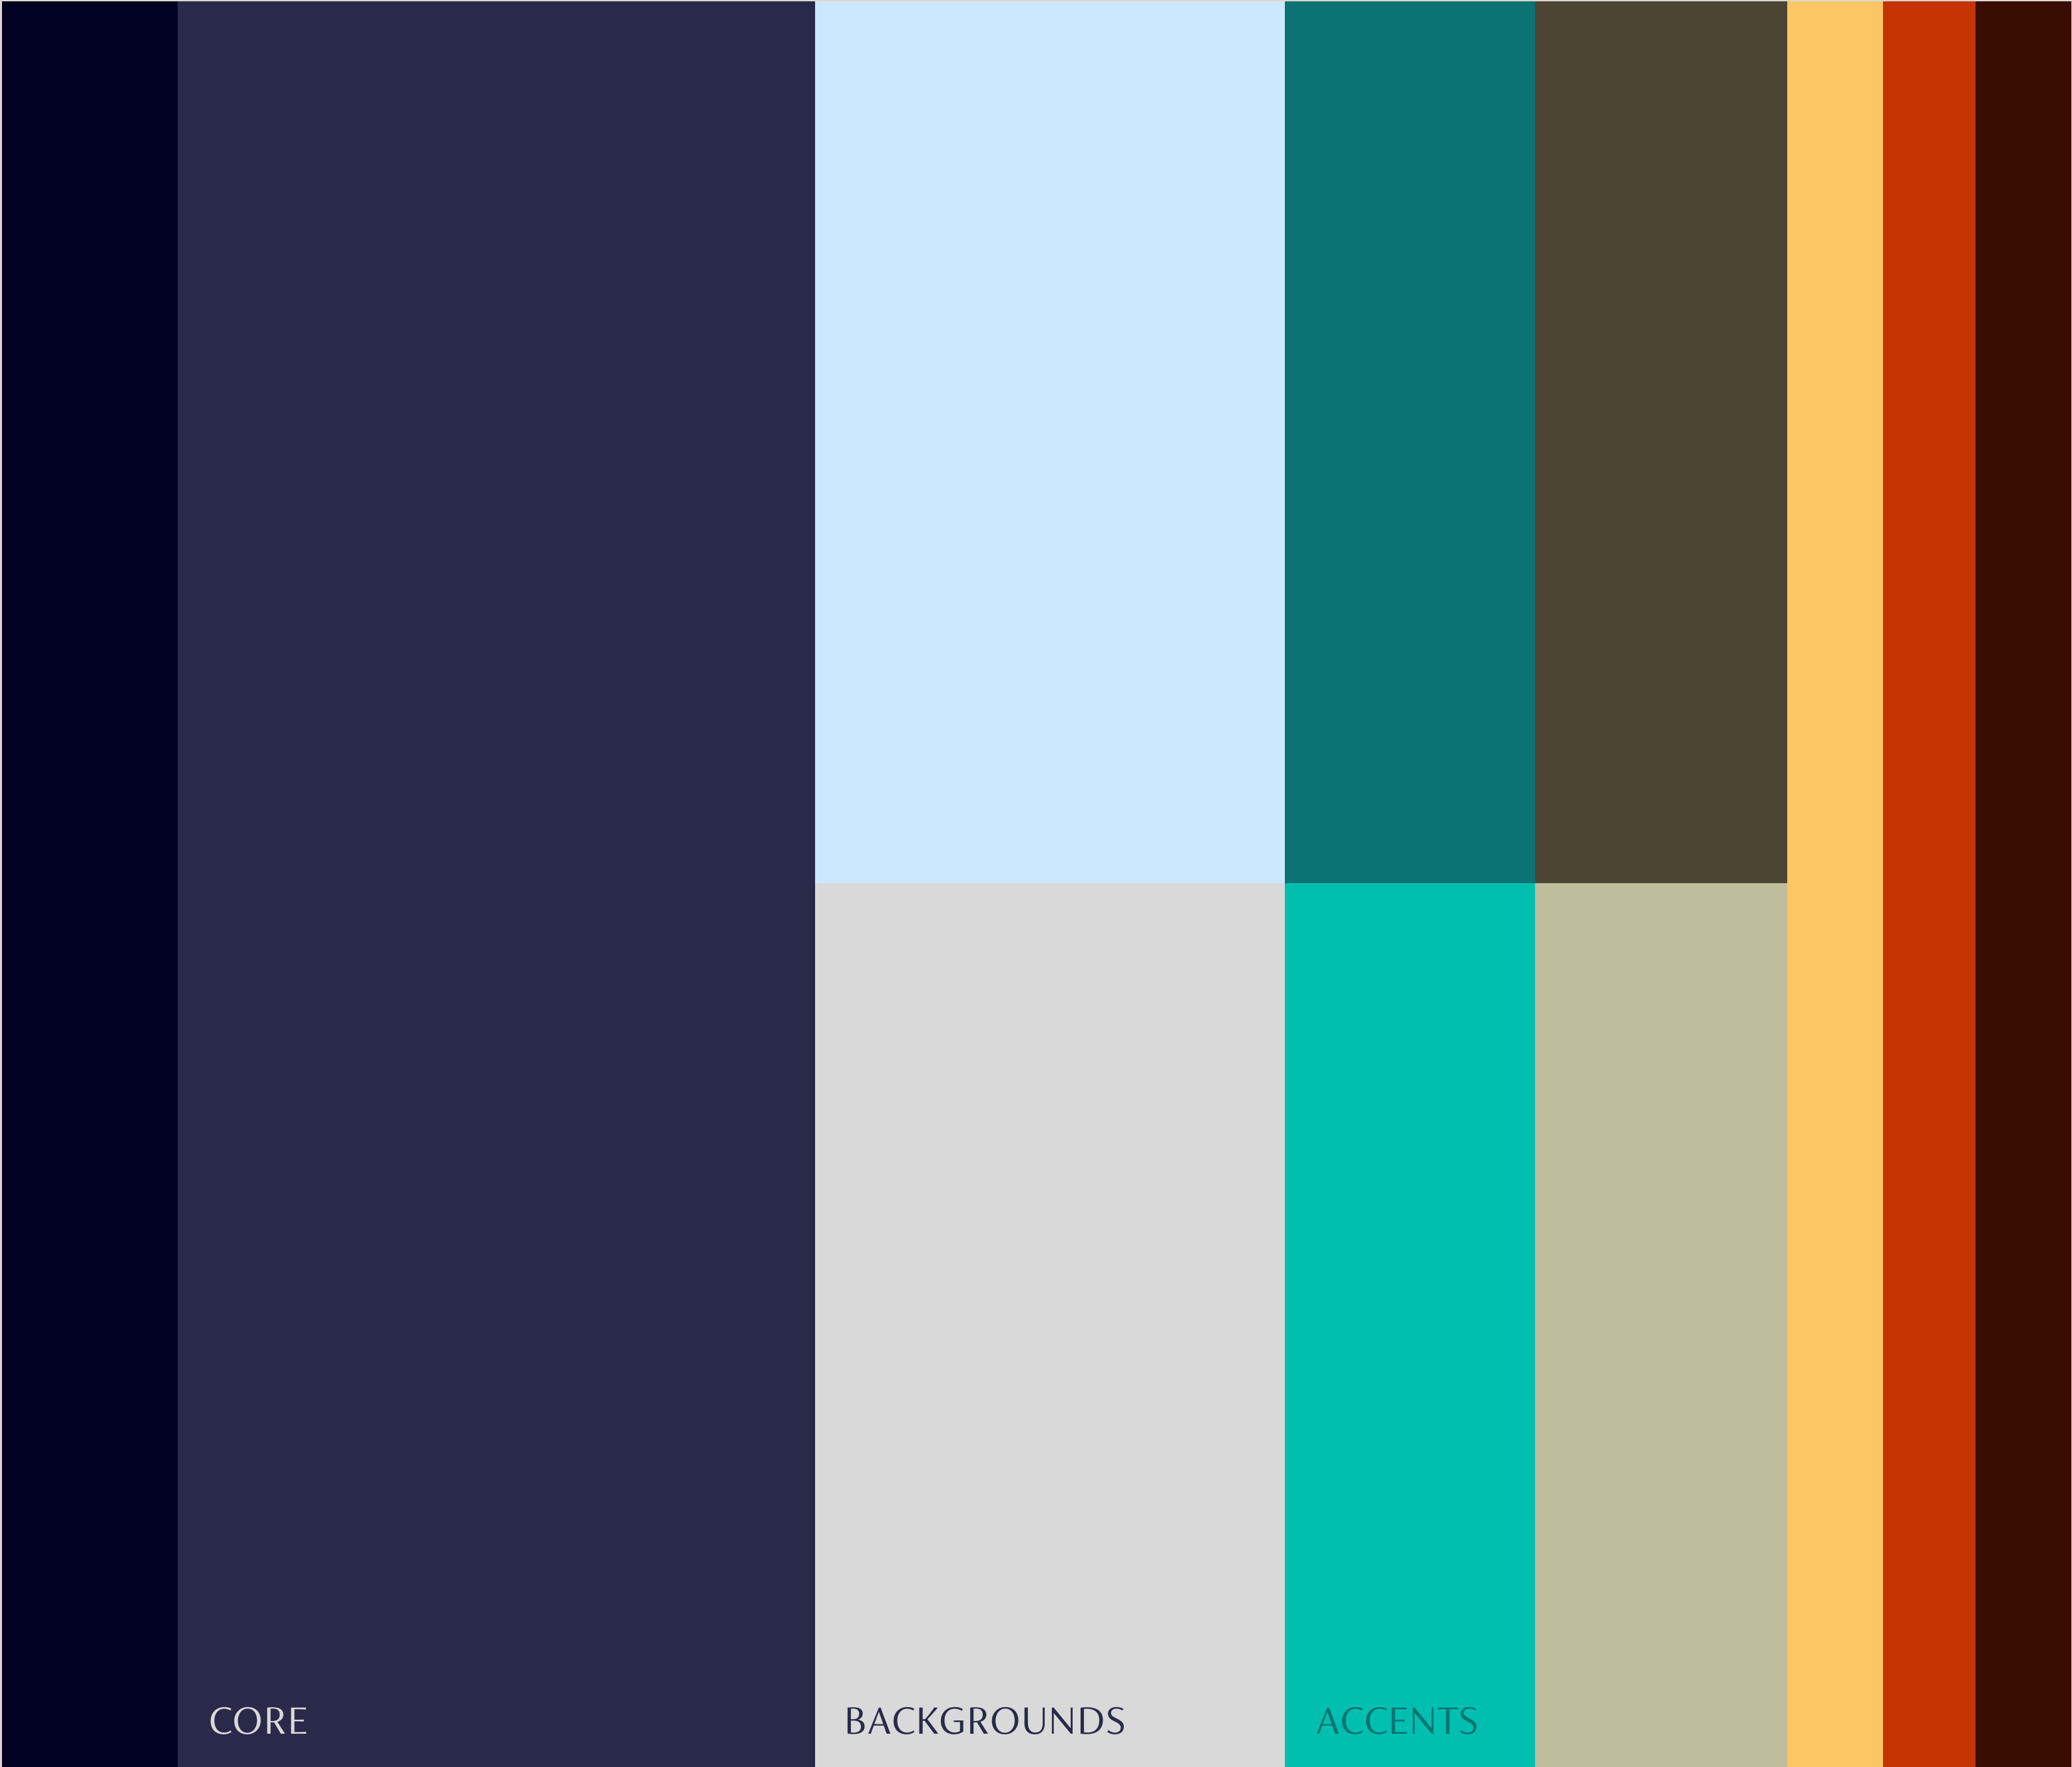

Our corporate colours play a crucial role in establishing brand identity and creating a cohesive visual experience across marketing communications and product interfaces. Here's why they are important:

Brand Recognition: Corporate colours act as a visual cue that helps customers identify and recognise your brand quickly. Consistently using the same set of colours throughout your marketing materials and product interfaces creates a strong association between the colours and your brand.

Familiarity: By using corporate colours consistently, you create a sense of familiarity for your audience. When customers see your brand's colours repeatedly, it builds trust, reliability, and loyalty towards your products or services.

Visual Consistency: Using corporate colours ensures visual consistency across different touchpoints, such as websites, social media profiles, packaging, and mobile apps. This consistency helps in reinforcing the brand's message and values.

Differentiation: Corporate colours can help differentiate your brand from competitors in the market. Choosing unique colour combinations or shades that align with your brand personality can make you stand out among similar offerings.

TYPOGRAPHY

Our corporate font is FS Siena.

It’s chosen due to its refined elegance and style, perfectly fitting for the impression of an established and trustworthy financial service provider.

Corporate typography plays a vital role in our brand expression as it contributes to the overall visual identity and communication of a brand.

Typography encompasses the selection, arrangement, and presentation of fonts that represent the brand's personality, values, and tone. Consistency in typography across various touchpoints such as advertisements, websites, and product interfaces enhances brand recognition and reinforces the brand's message.

By defining specific font styles, sizes, spacing, and usage guidelines in brand guidelines, companies ensure that their typography aligns with their desired image and maintains a cohesive visual experience. Effective corporate typography not only establishes a strong brand presence but also helps to establish trust, credibility, and differentiation in the market.

PHOTO STYLE

What we want people to feel

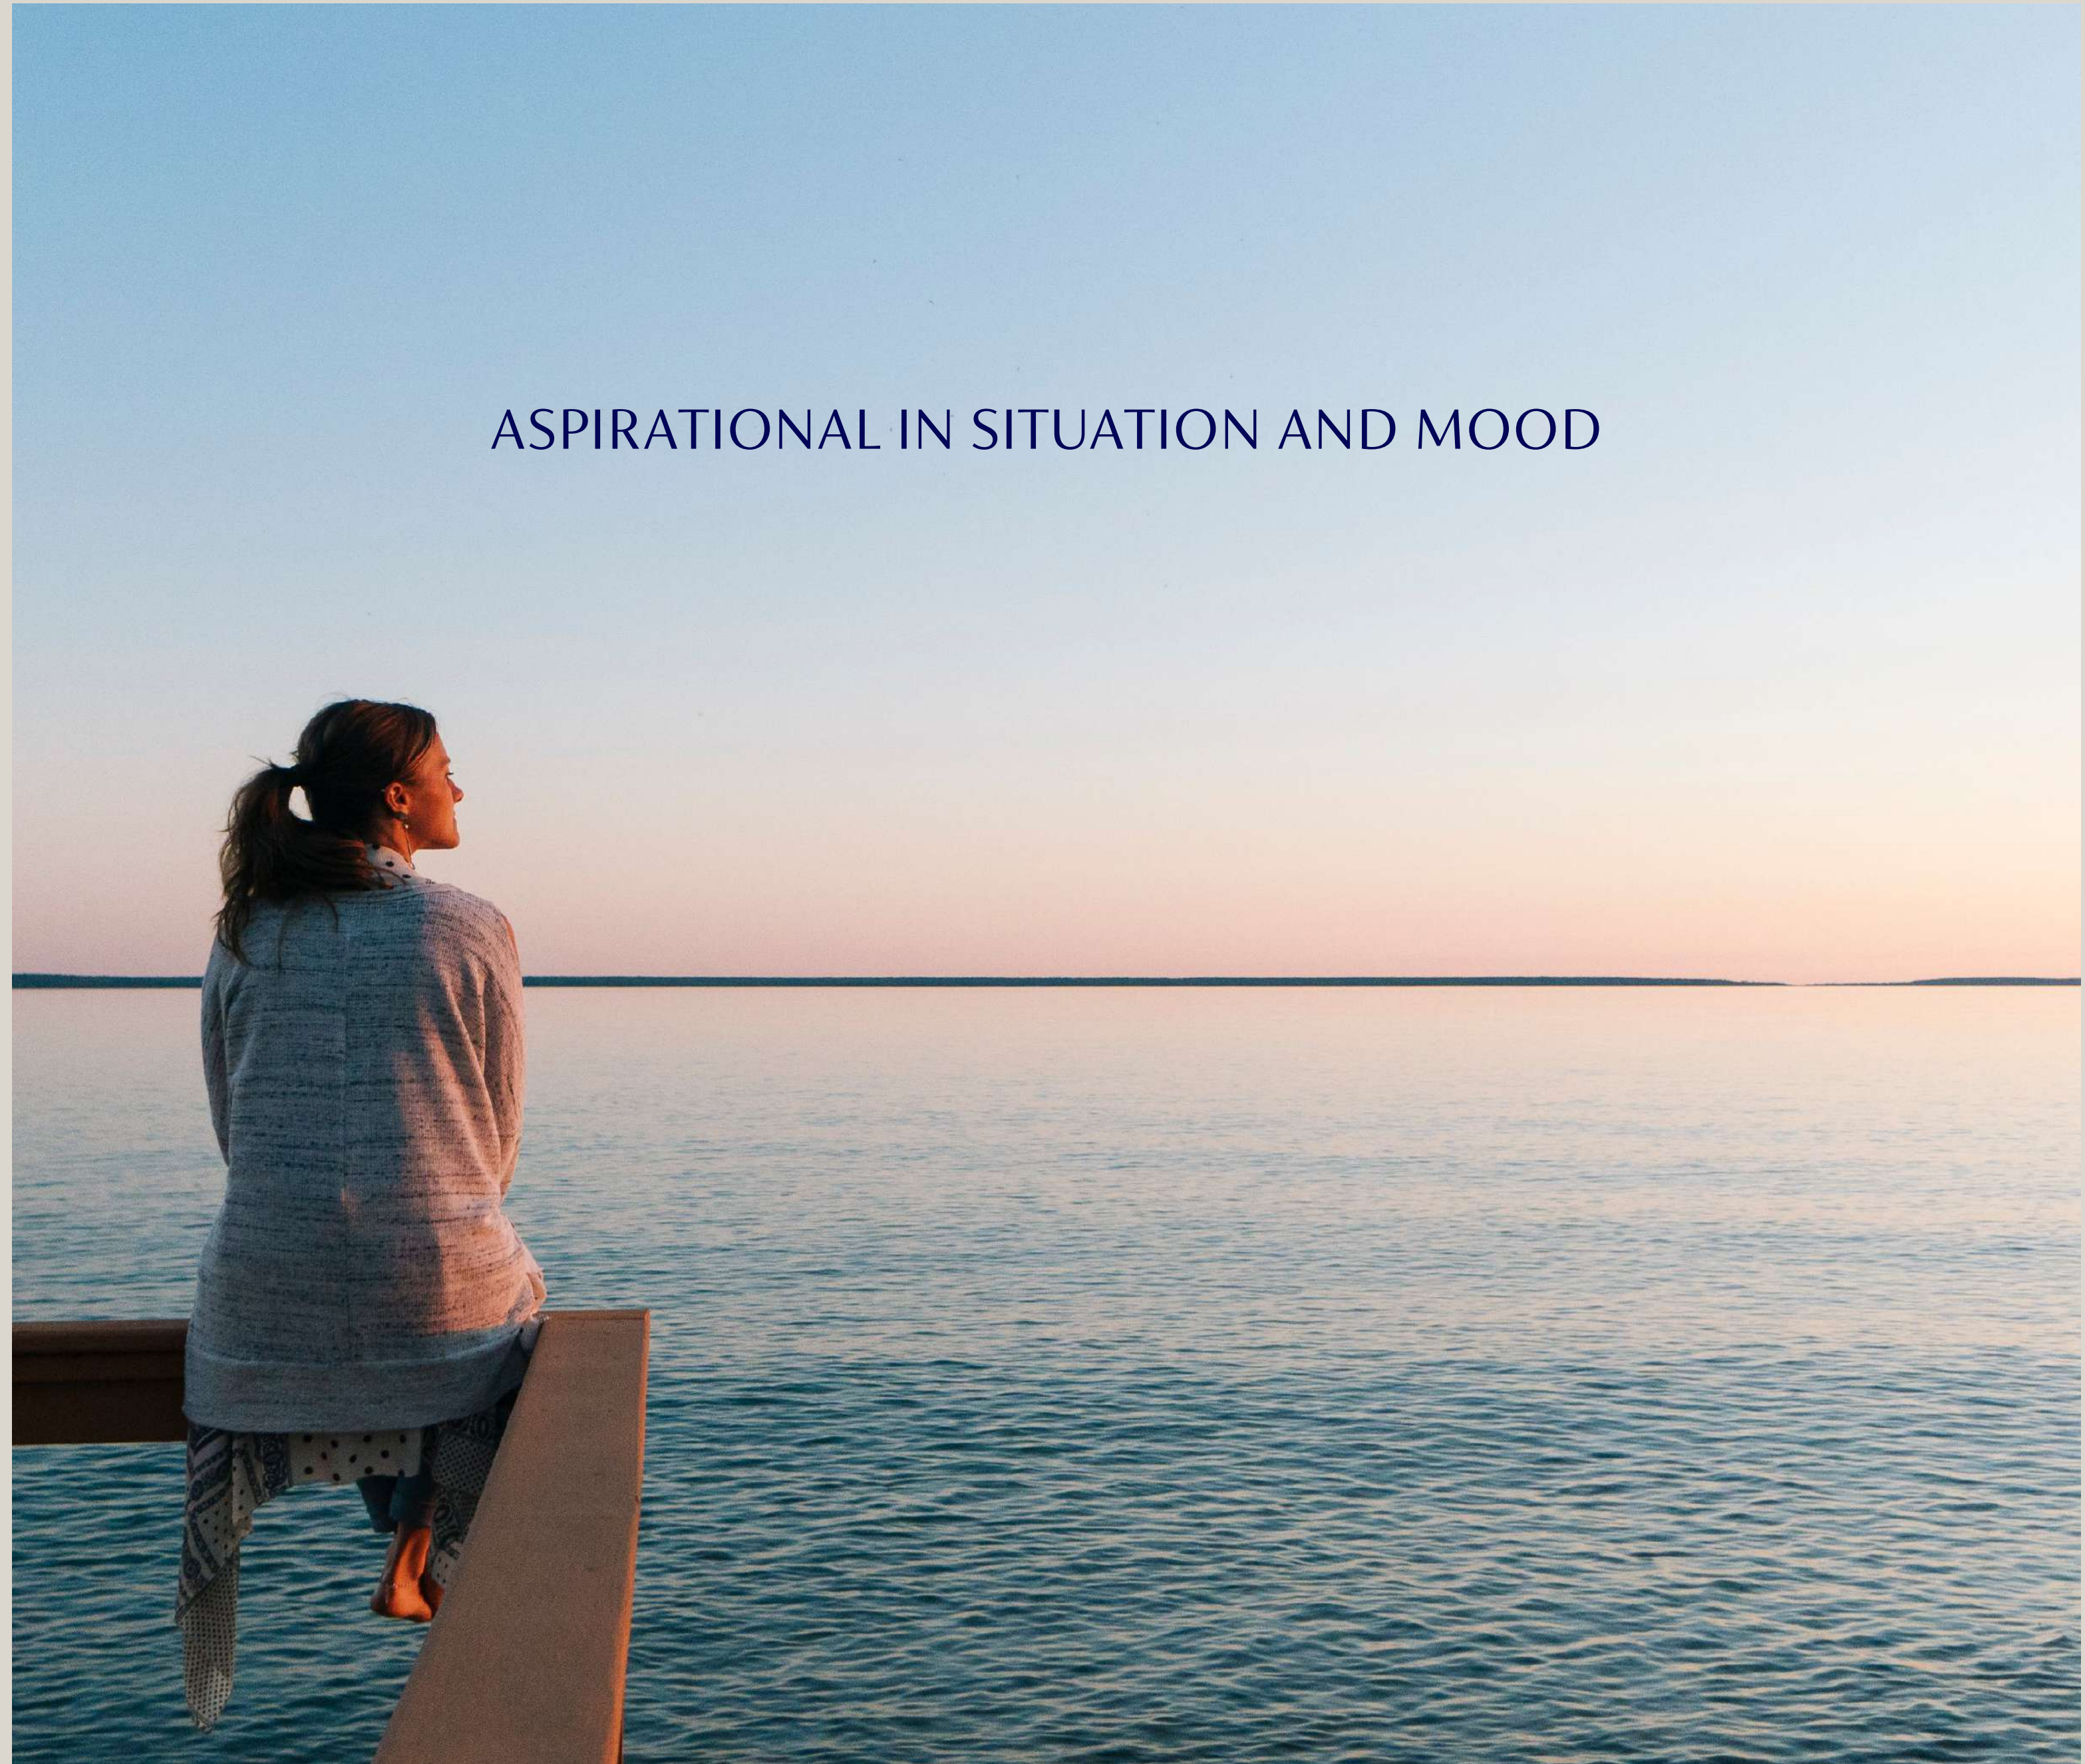

Consistent use of photography in our corporate identity is essential for several reasons. First and foremost, photography has the power to evoke emotions and tell stories that words alone cannot convey.

By consistently using the same style, tone, and quality of photography across marketing materials, websites, and social media platforms, we can create a cohesive visual language that resonates with our target audience. This consistency helps to establish our brand recognition and build familiarity among customers.

Additionally, consistent use of photography reinforces the brand's messaging and values by visually representing who we are, our services, and company culture. It also allows for better differentiation from competitors by showcasing unique perspectives or highlighting specific aspects of the brand's offerings.

Ultimately, the consistent use of photography in the corporate identity helps to create a strong and memorable visual presence that enhances our brand perception over time.

“O” IN USE

The o lends itself for clean and visible applications and in places where we want a higher level of character. Signature applications like business cards or bank cards is an example of more precious use while flags and larger items that need a high level of visibility is anther.

In essence, where we think a stronger signature is a appropriate we will aim to use the O as an element for more impact.

INSTAGRAM

Instagram is quick and easy way to establish a digital footprint, but while it's allow threshold to publish it still requires thought and consideration to maintain the right expression.

Branded posts should follow the style of our branded communication and focus on a aspirational lifestyle that attracts the audience we desire.

But while this sounds serious the language of the platform itself can allow more relaxed and playful variations as well when done with consideration. It can be of great use to capture moments and situations reflecting the lifestyle of the customers.

Visually it should follow the main brand with clear statements, ample use of space and project a feeling of warmth and proactive helpfulness.

NEWSLETTER

Our digital newsletters mirrors our digital channels and other communication.

Elegant and informative, it's clear, clean and inviting with ample white space and a well judged blend of promotional messages mixed with information and news that is highly relevant for our customers needs as property owners in a foreign country.

Digital channels: Email newsletters

Newsletter

The newsletter should use clear and attractive images for the top field. Images should reflect the aspirational nature of what lifestyle our readers aspire to and be changing with the season or subject of the current edition.

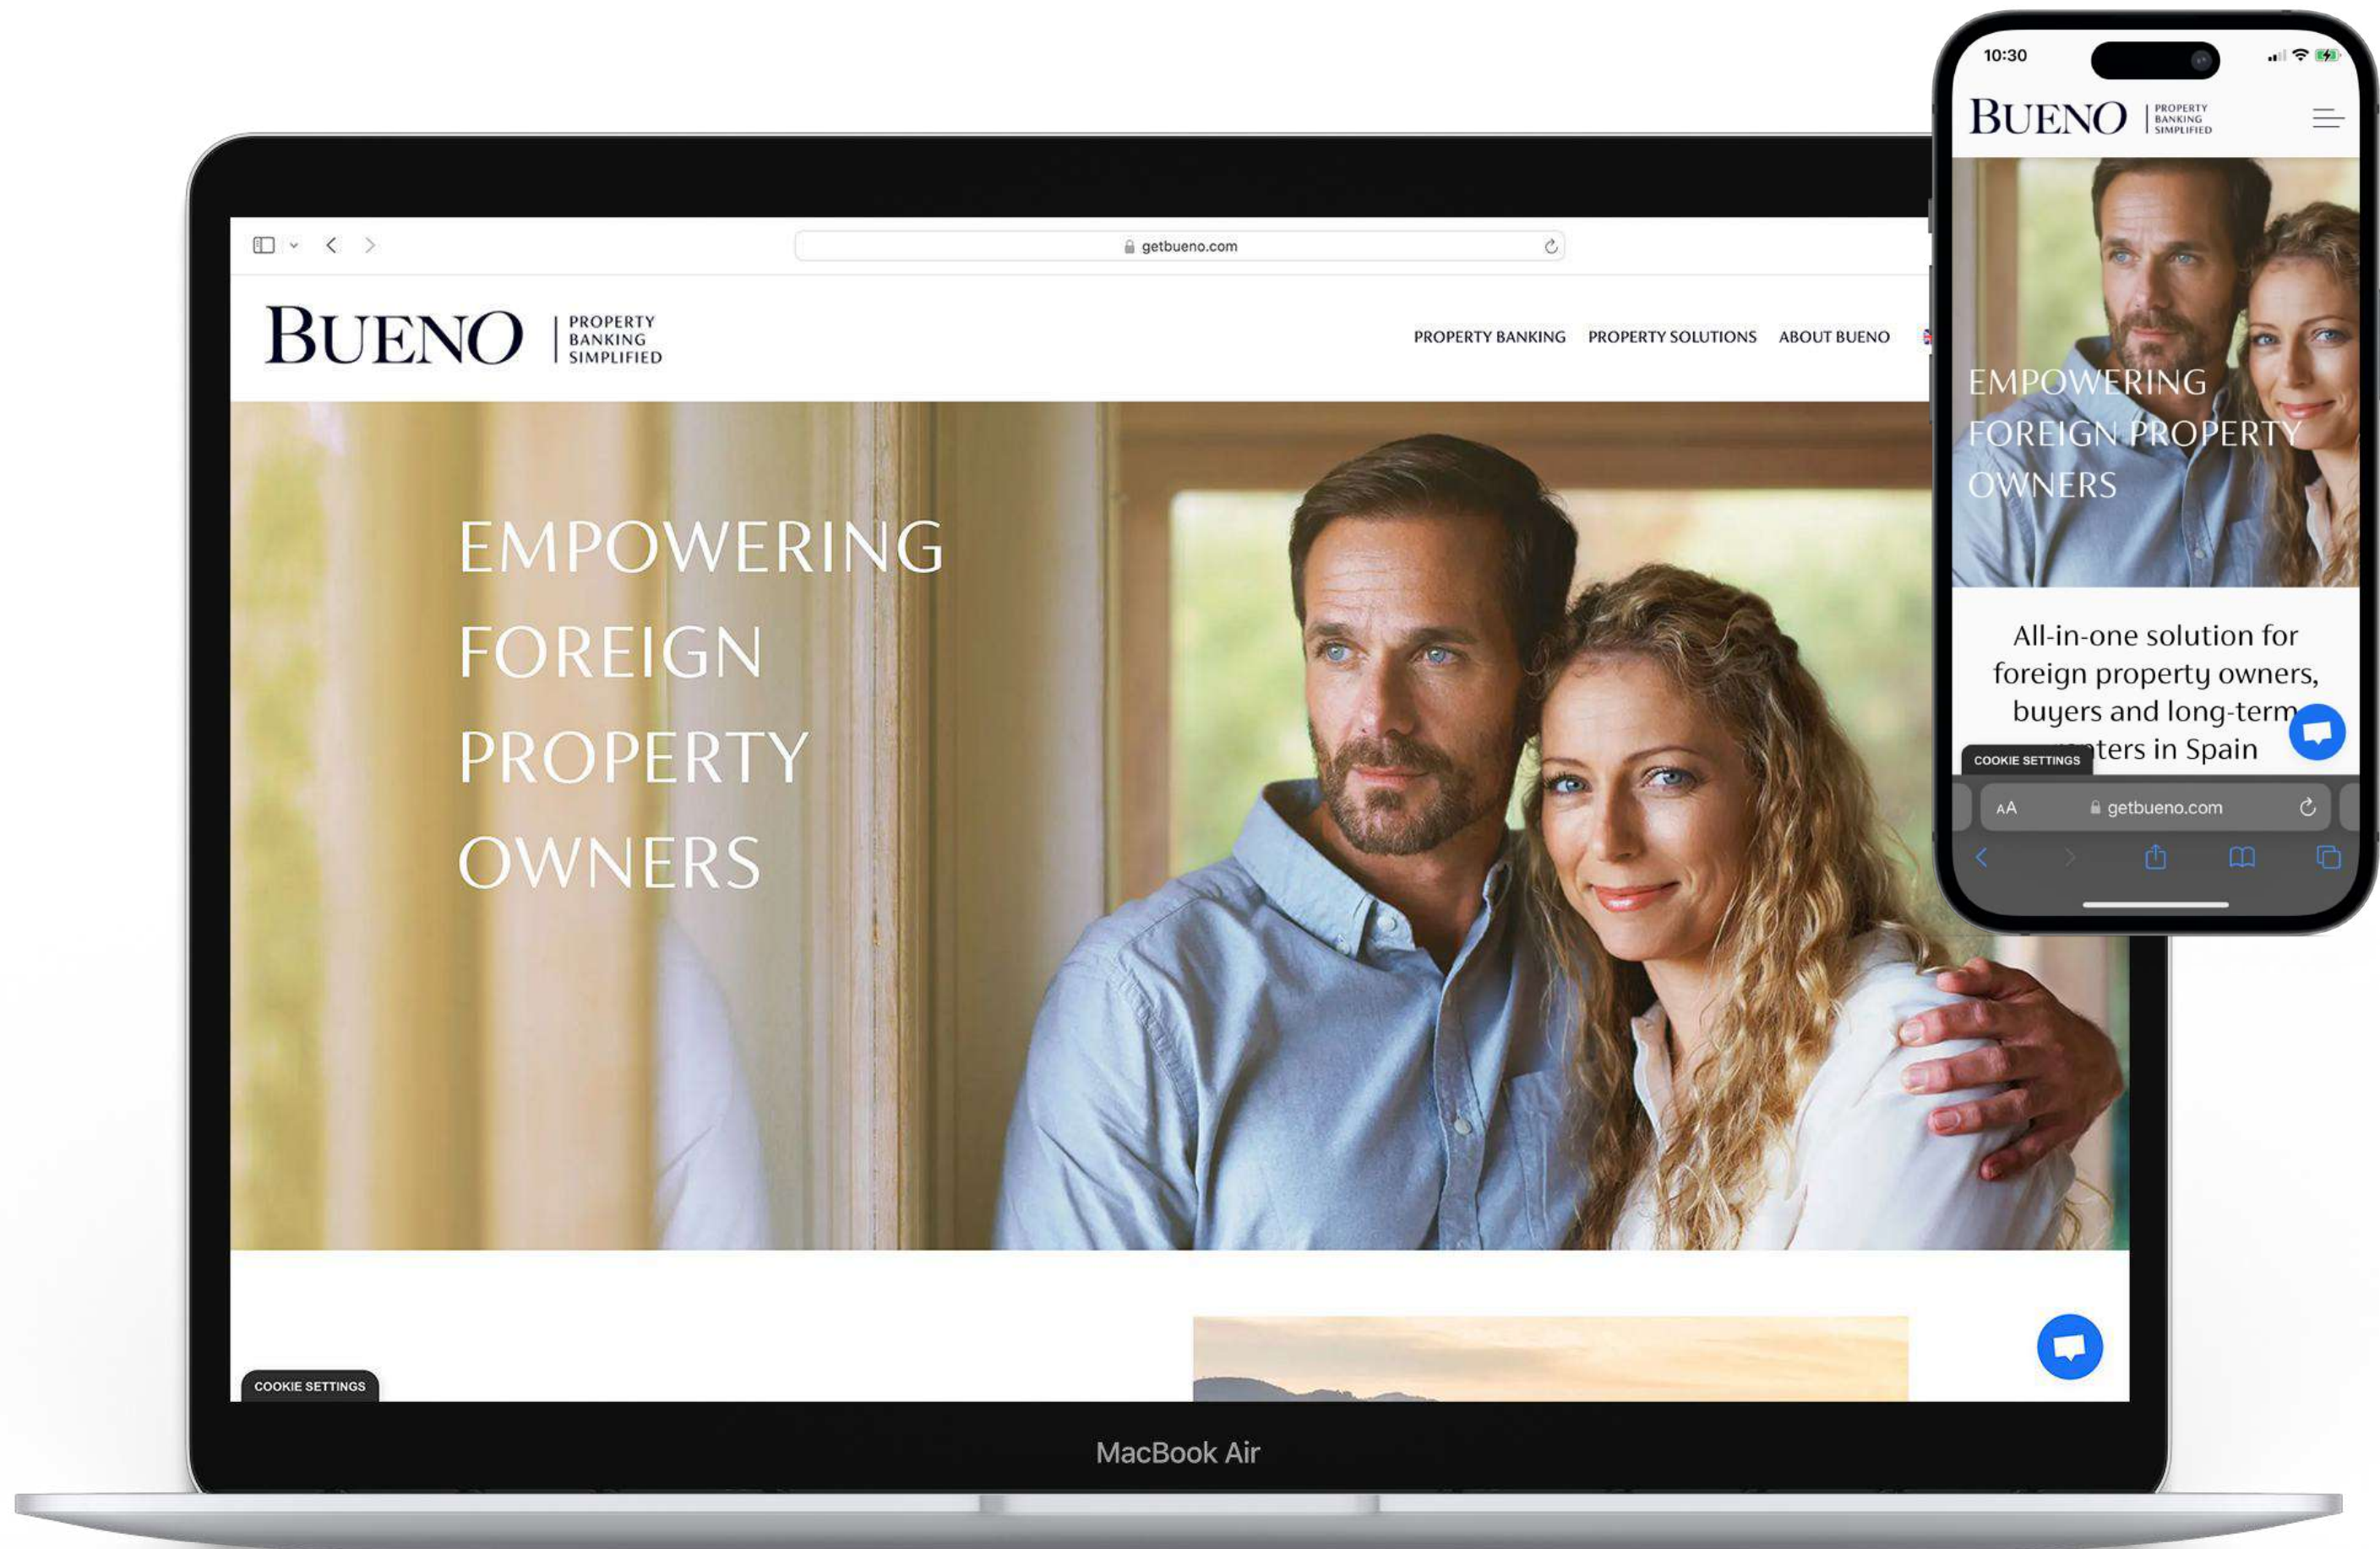

Ample white space for elegant expression and clear and attractive message in headlines.

WEB

As seen in previous applications our expression varies slightly from medium to medium in order to perform as well as possible within the restrictions of each one. This applies to our web presence as well, the overall goal is not to be identical from one channel to another but to appear as you are with a consistent look and feel.

This also applies to different devices within the same medium, the appearance between a desktop view of our web pages and the phone version will naturally deviate in both navigation and layout but what we will aim for to preserve is the same impression of us as a essential provider of financial services regardless of how you view us.

Digital channels: Web

WEB

As we evolve and improve our web presence, images, motion and interaction will be updated and refined bit by bit. As with everything digital things take time and it’s better to start with things that work well than waiting until its perfect.

Finding the digital “voice” is also something that needs to be explored over time in order to find the right way to evolve and grow the expression of our brand.

What is at the moment static will be evolved to become more dynamic with subtle motion and interaction.

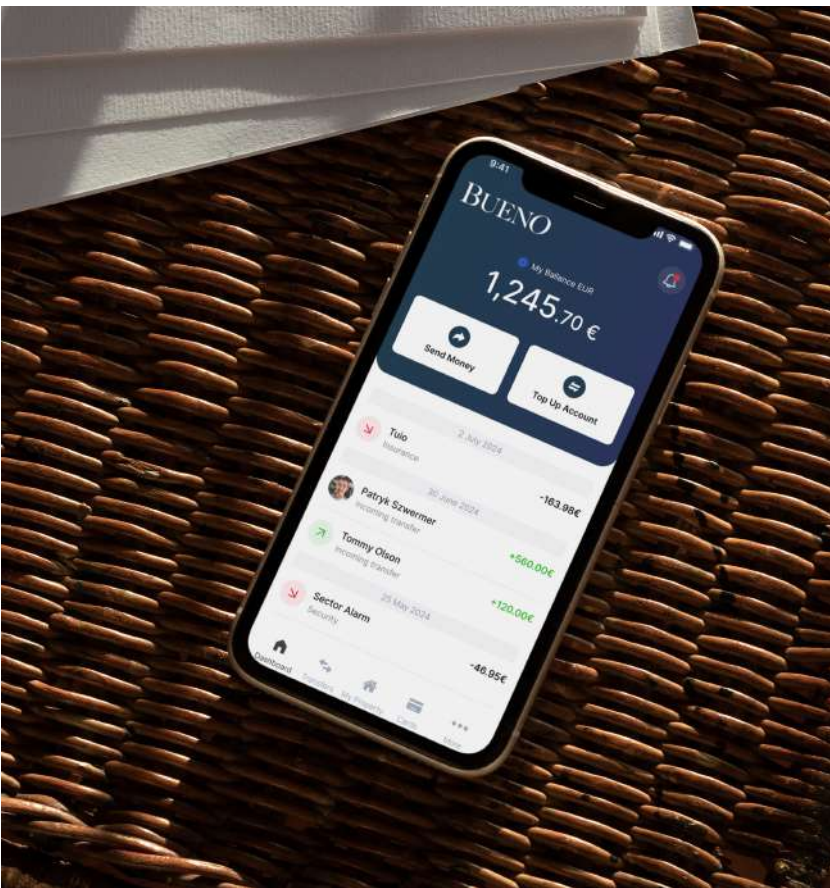

For example, Images that are at the moment still should have a slight movement in zoom, shading or overlying text during mouseover, what is now information boxes with links should become openable and collapsable menu items, segments of the page will be revealed dynamically when scrolling etc.

WEB

How and when we improvements should be considered is of course a fine balance between resources and economy. But a rule of thumb should be that whenever we change an image, a page or introduce a new segment we should take the time to explore what new ways we can apply to improve and better the experience.

To simplify, it can be small things that in their own way greatly change the perception, changing a image to a video, adding a photo to a new text, taking a few more minutes to craft a headline etc.

Digital channels: Web

Gradual improvement of the website might for example be replacing an image with a slow motion video of the same subject, this would bring added depth and emotion to the subject while still performing the same visualisation of the subject.

PRINT

In printed communication we want to maintain the sophisticated and approachable elegant expression. As mentioned in the photo guidelines we want aspirational people and situations. Something that suggests the lifestyle that our customers desire to achieve.

Language and messages should be short, clear, focused and precisely target the needs of our potential customers.

Print advertising

Double page

Single page

PRINT IN USE

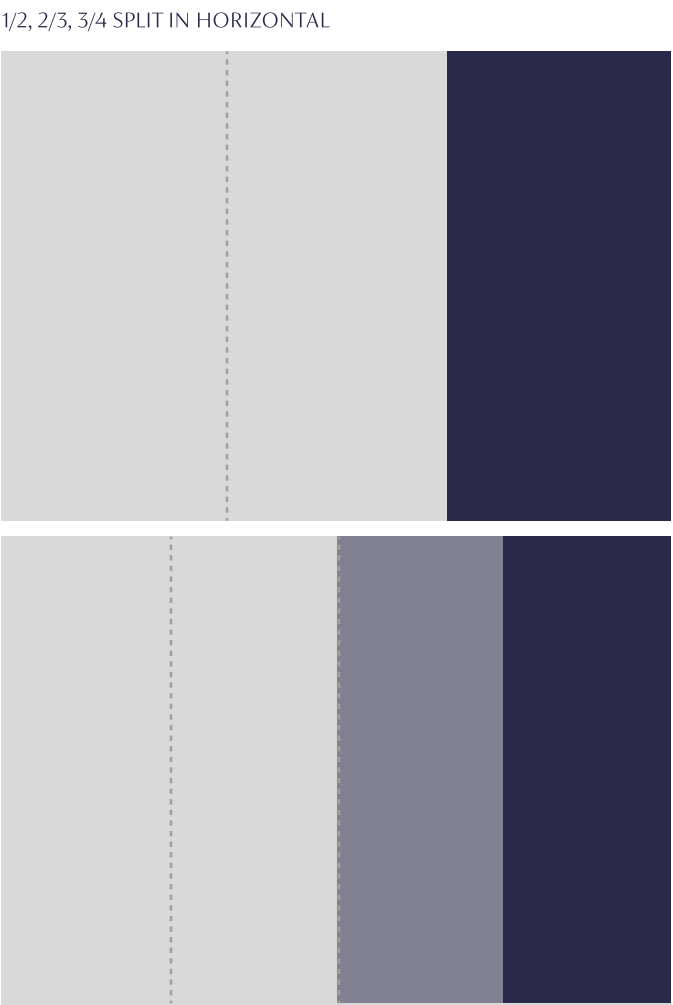

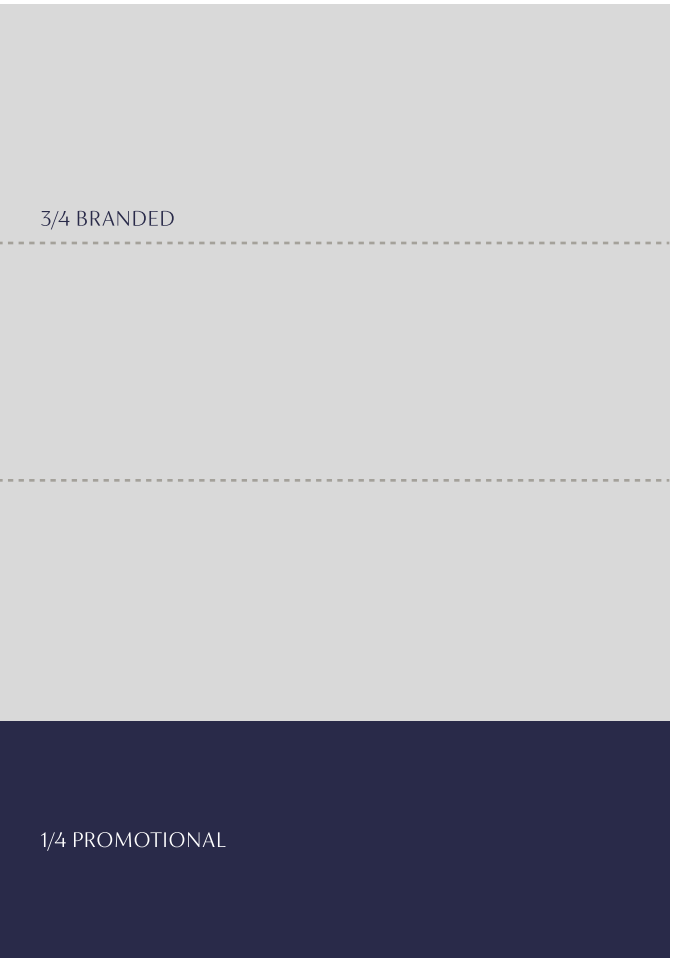

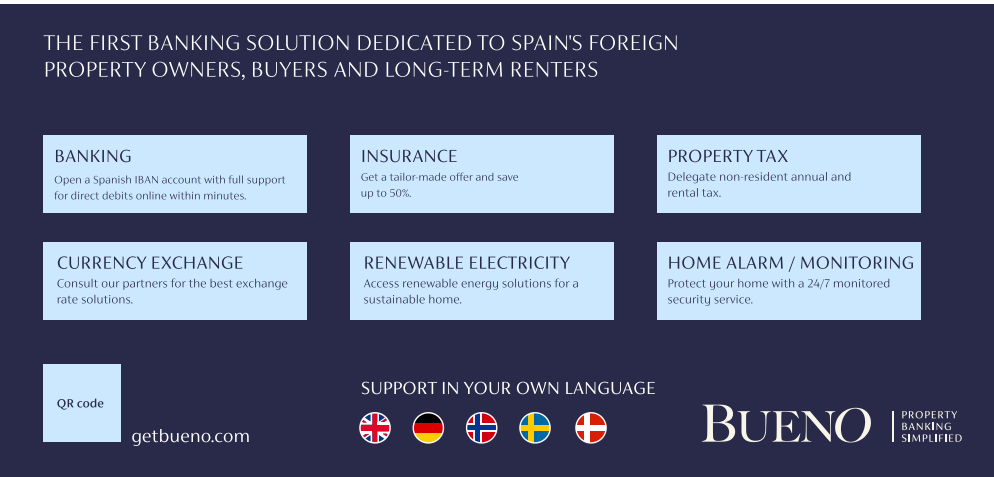

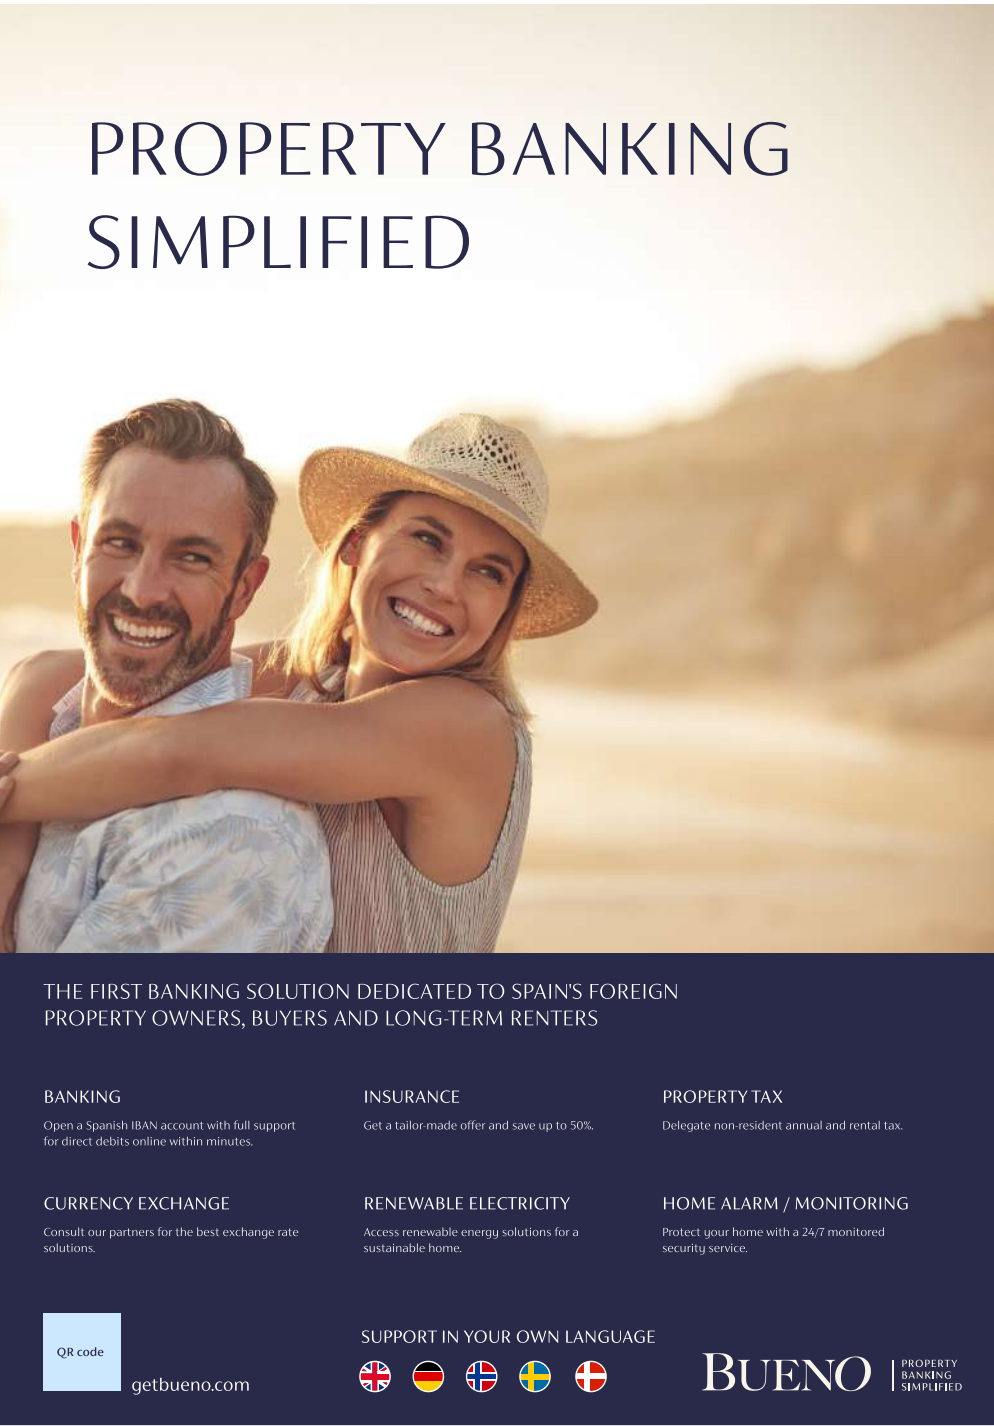

The previous pages described the ideal scenario where we mainly do brand building communication, in real world scenarios we need to be pragmatic and adjust the message to the needs in the moment, sometimes this is due to constraints in space, the channel or simply being economical in our use of paid communication.

There will be times when we need to combine more aspirational communication with more pragmatic offerings or information of our services. To facilitate this we have a grid system for the different needs where a 50/50 split is the minimum for a combined message while 2/3 split or 3/4 is a more balanced combination.

We can also adjust the volume on the more promotional part, from a more discrete presentation to more “loud” variants where we use boxes to highlight the information.

Here we can also adjust colours to match season or message for a more impactful result.

Print advertising, branded & product message

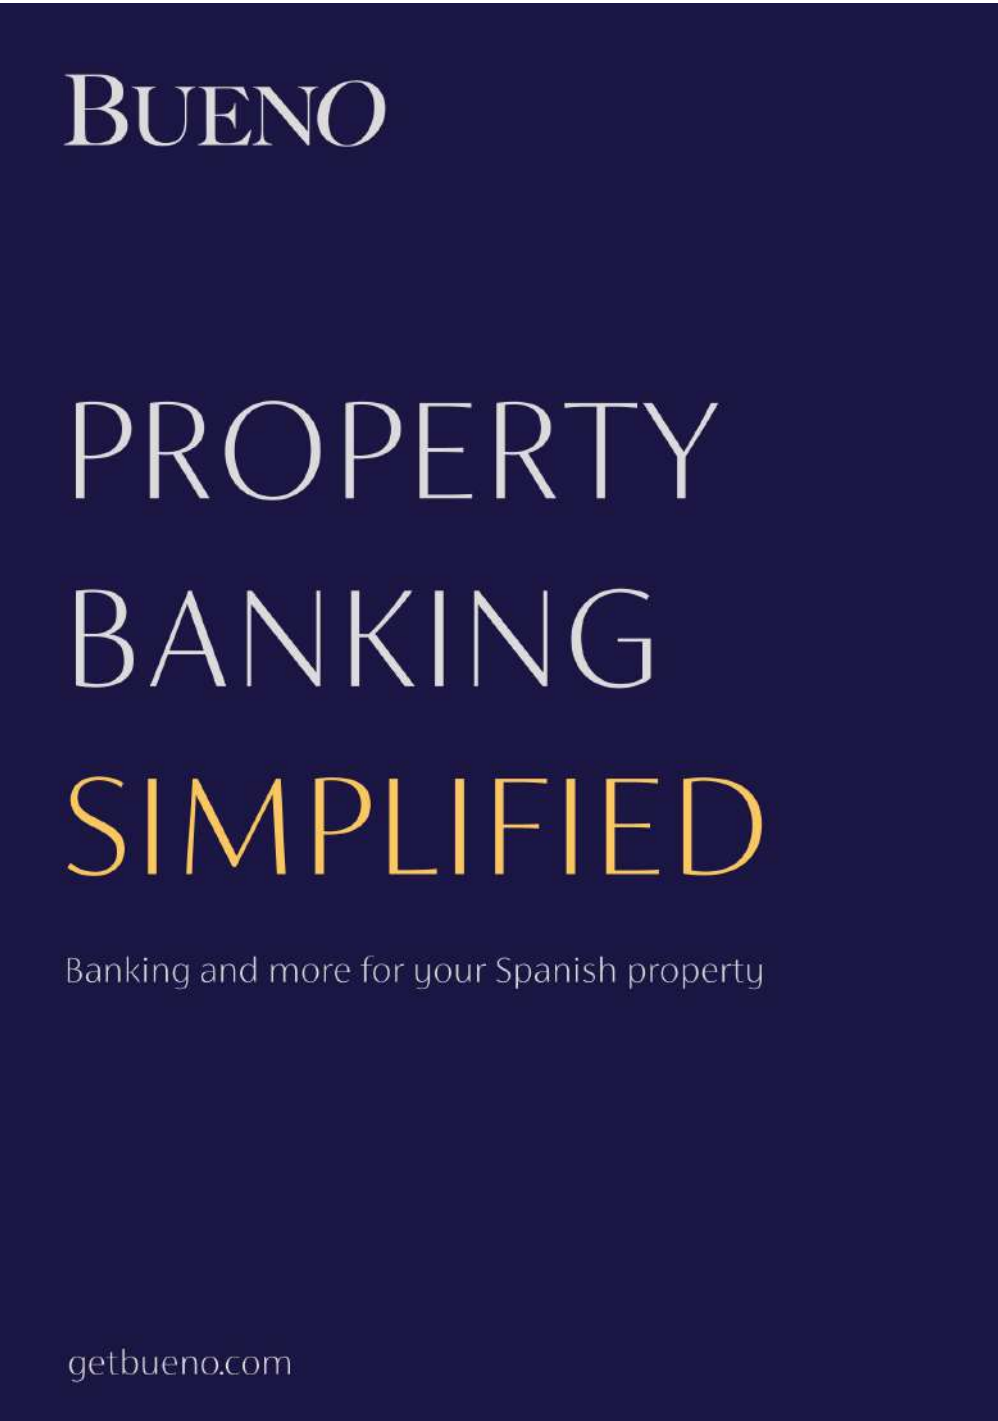

PRINT

Content and messaging should be consequent but also context appropriate, more premium applications demands more considered content while simpler channels can carry more direct and shorter communication.

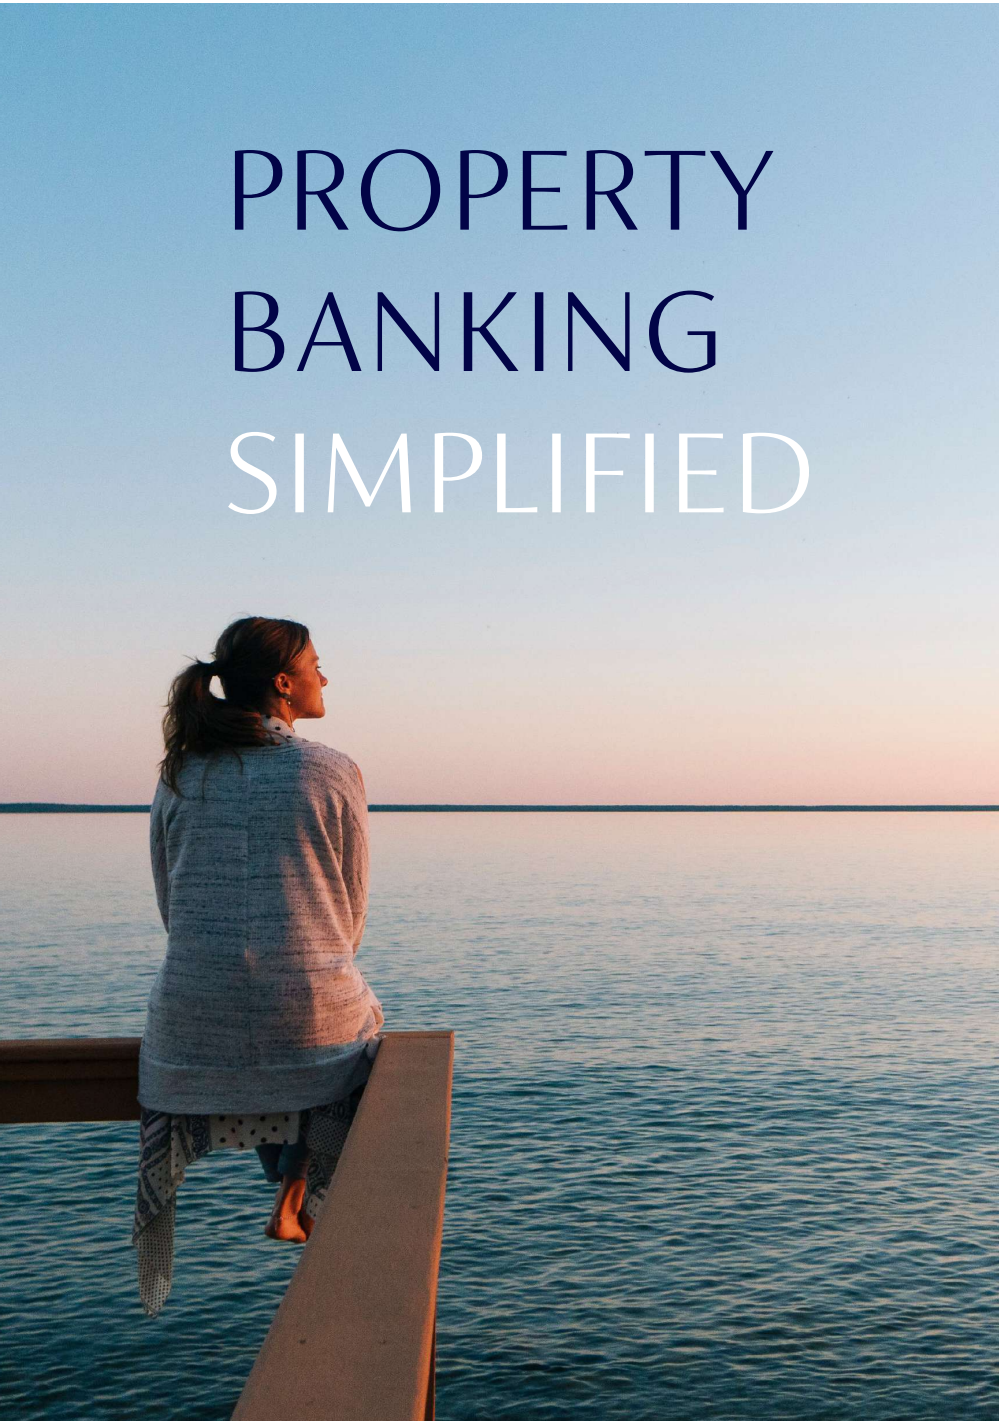

When working with small printed items like leaflets, flyers etc try to maintain a split between branded communication and more tactical service offers (see print advertising) where we can dedicate a page to each message and avoid over complicating what we are trying to say.

Flyers

Flyers

Small applications like flyers and folders should focus on the key message to maintain the look and feel of our brand.

Storytelling

Combine images with the right headlines to quickly and effectively project what we are trying to say.

PRINT

Business cards

Cards

While the need for business cards is highly reduced when most communication is digital there is still occasions when a more personal touch can give the impression we desire. Our cards should reflect this with a refined elegance and the use of solid paper weights that gives the correct feeling of quality.

PRINT

Folders

Folders

As with business cards our printed material should use premium papers to give the correct impression of quality for our identity. As less and less is getting printed the importance to give the right feeling when presented with documents increases in importance.

When we present or send documents to customers we should ensure that what we print on normal printers always has a wrapping that lives up to the expectations we want our customers to experience from us.

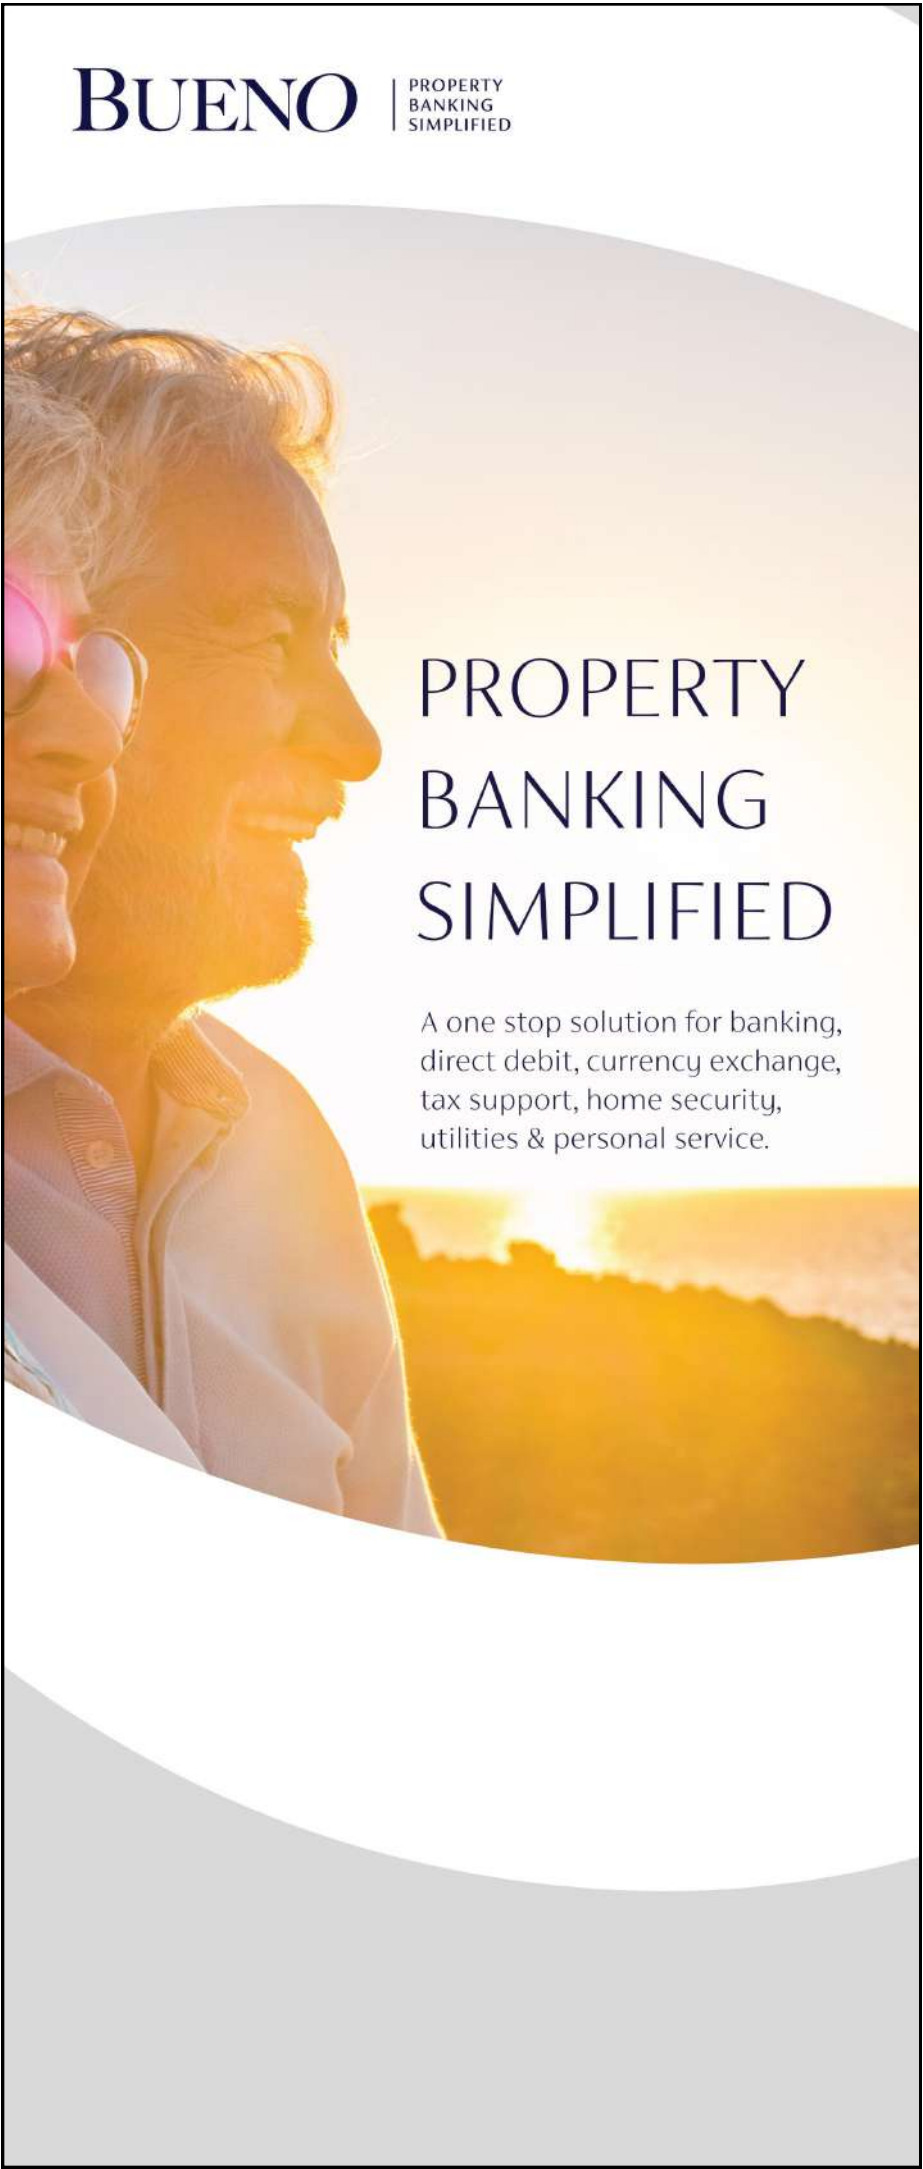

ROLL-UPS

Roll-ups can be both permanent and highly context dependant depending when and how they are used.

If a venue affords more than one it can be highly appropriate to work with both brand building prints as well as perhaps more targeting messages fitting the event / situation itself.

Remember to focus important information in the upper part of the print to make sure a higher level of visibility.

Roll-ups and stands

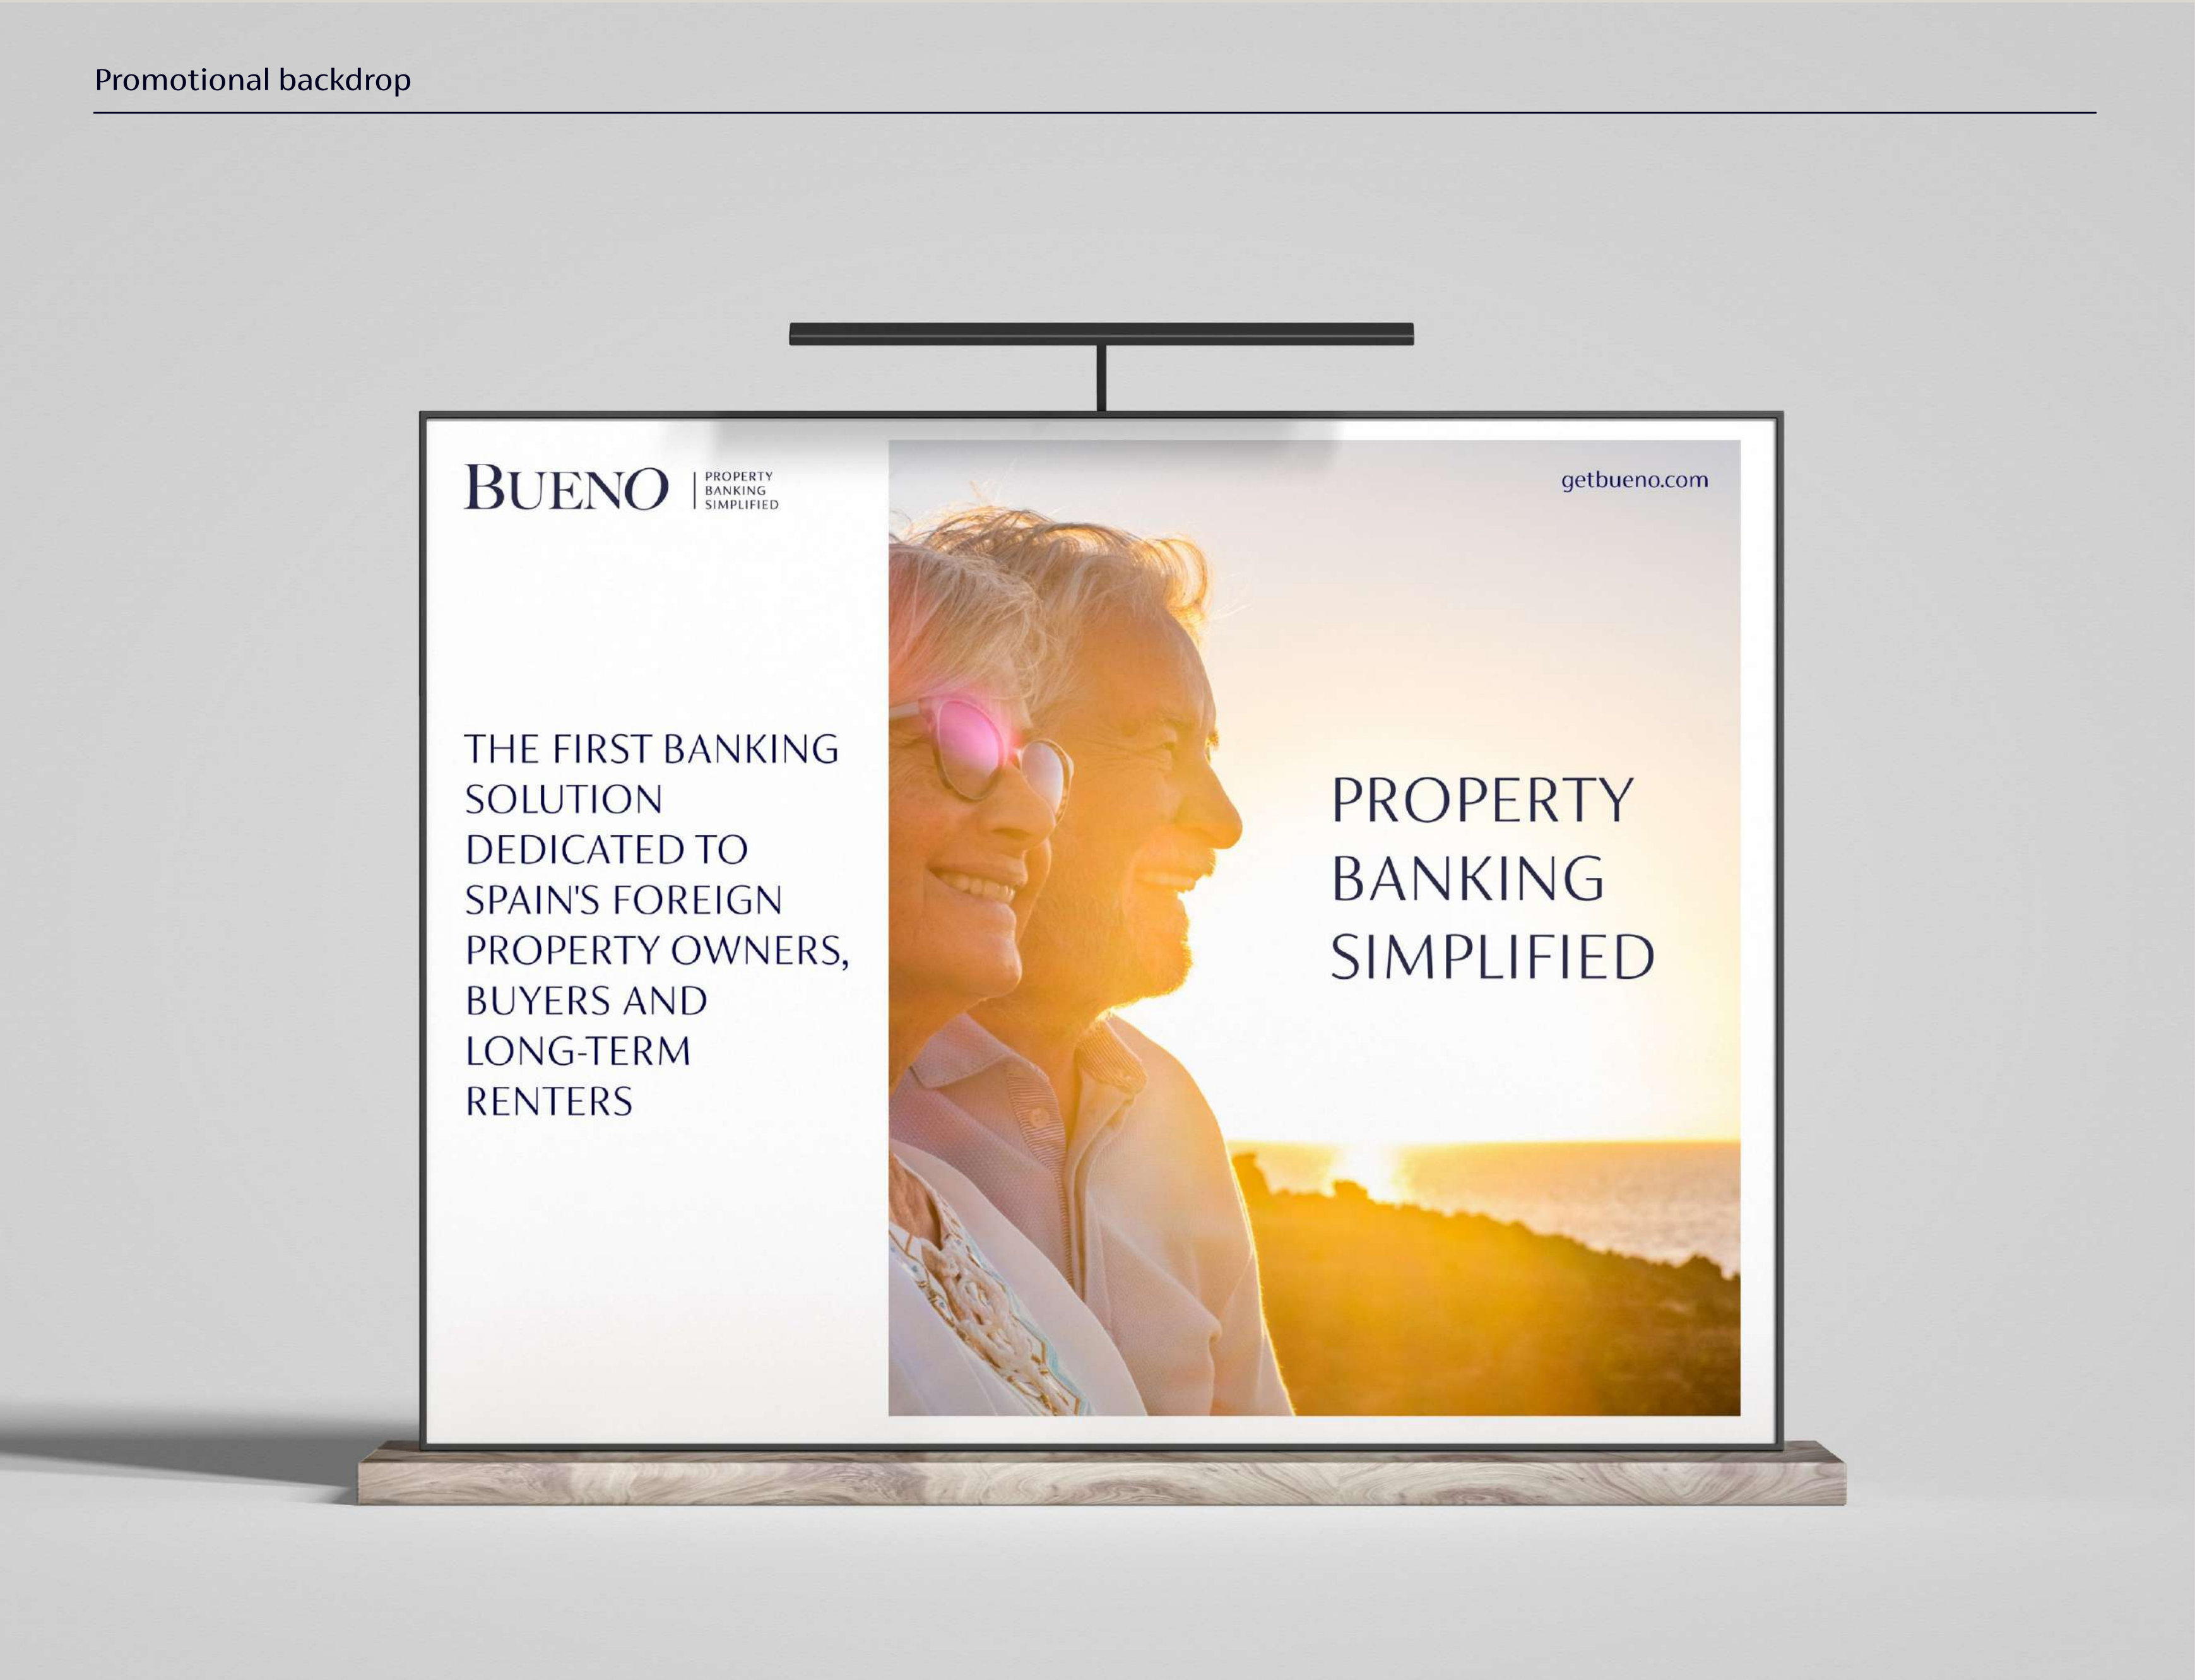

Foldable stand desk

EXHIBITION STANDS

Exhibition stands usually exists in two iterations, the identity focused and the context adapted. The context adapted version will of course have a highly branded expression but adjust its message to fit the occasion.

FLAGS

Flags and beach flags will initially focus heavily on the core colours and message for clarity. We use the O as a decorative element for higher recognition. The visual language is also more relaxed and “playful” to fit more informal and relaxed settings.

A combination of several different versions will also build a more interesting visual impression compared to the same layout repeated a number of times.

SIGNAGE

Signage is highly location dependent, we need to adjust to the requirements of the local property and the surfaces we have at our disposal. This means that in some cases we need to confine signage to windows and in other cases to physical elements that display our identity and logo.

Our signage should be clear but work in harmony with it's surroundings. use materials that signals quality and reflects the core of our identity.

SIGNAGE

As with the other aspects of our identity, space is equally important in our signage. Impact is not always about having the largest sign or space but allowing our logo room to breath and space to stand out.

PROMOTIONAL MATERIAL

Promotional materials should have clear messages and focus on quality over quantity. How we appear in promotional settings reflects in high degree on how potential customers will perceive us as a brand. Not only in the way we act and communicate but how we dress and the quality of the material.

Clothing

PROMOTIONAL MATERIAL

Promotional material as in giveaways etc. should to the upmost degree be quality over quantity.

Materials that reflect the quality we want to stand for as a financial institution for our customers. Items should also be context relevant, products that relate to out potential customers lifestyle and expectations.

Quality in items and materials

With giveaways we should make sure the quality and the context of the items represent who we are and what we stand for as a brand, an item of inferior quality will not be used and will therefor contribute to increased pollution but also reflect poorly on us as a sender. Always think quality over quantity.
