

YOUR GUIDE TO HOME CARE

Caring for your Spanish home from abroad

A home that stands empty for months needs a little planning. This guide gives you a calm, simple routine that prevents most costly surprises.

INTRODUCTION

Small checks, fewer surprises

Most problems in an empty home start small: a dripping pipe, a blocked gutter, a patch of damp. Caught early, they cost little. Left for a season, they can cost a great deal.

The essentials at a glance

- Turn off the water at the main tap whenever you leave.
- Clear gutters, drains and terraces before the autumn rains.
- Leave air moving with vents or a dehumidifier to keep damp away.
- Ask someone you trust to visit regularly and after storms.
- Keep receipts for repairs. Insurers expect a home to be looked after.

A season-by-season plan

Each season brings its own risks. A short list for each one keeps the work light.

Spring	Service the air conditioning before the heat arrives. In pine areas, watch for processionary caterpillar nests in late winter and early spring.
Summer	Check the pool, the irrigation and any shutters exposed to strong sun. Keep dry vegetation away from the house.
Autumn	Clear gutters, roof drains and terrace outlets. Heavy autumn rain in parts of Spain can quickly flood a blocked terrace.
Winter	Look for damp on north-facing walls and in wardrobes. Run taps and air the rooms on every visit.

A closing-up routine

Ten minutes before you lock the door does most of the work for the months ahead.

01 Water, gas and power

Close the main water tap and the gas. Leave the fridge empty and open, and keep power on only for alarms or anything you need.

02 Air and light

Leave interior doors and wardrobes slightly open so air can move. Lower the shutters to keep out the sun.

03 Someone on call

Give a key to a neighbour or a key holder, and agree how often they will visit and how they will tell you what they find.

04 Bills in order

Make sure IBI, community fees and supplies are paid by direct debit, so nothing falls behind while you are away.
