INTRODUCTION

Cover that fits a home you are often away from

Home insurance is not compulsory by law in Spain, but a mortgage lender will require it and most owners take it out anyway. The details matter more for a holiday home, because many policies treat an empty home differently.

The essentials at a glance

- Building cover protects the structure and contents cover protects what is inside.
- Liability cover pays if water or fire from your home damages a neighbour's.
- Floods and extreme storms are paid by a state-backed fund through your policy.
- Many policies limit cover when a home stands empty for a long time.
- A claim should be reported within seven days of finding the damage.

The parts of a Spanish home policy

Spanish policies are usually built from the same pieces. Knowing their names makes it much easier to compare offers.

Continente	The building itself: walls, roof, floors, fixed fittings, and in a flat your share of the structure.
Contenido	Your furniture, appliances and belongings, including theft if the policy says so.
Responsabilidad civil	Liability cover for damage you cause to others, such as a leak into the flat below.

Floods, earthquakes and storms with extreme winds are paid by the Consorcio de Compensación de Seguros, a state-backed fund. A small part of every home policy goes to it, so you are covered as long as your policy is valid and paid.

What to check when you are away for months

Read the small print on these points before winter, when most holiday homes stand empty.

01 Empty home clauses

Some policies reduce or exclude theft and water cover if nobody has been in the home for a set number of days. Ask how many days, and whether a regular visit by a neighbour or a key holder counts.

02 Letting the home

If you let your home, tell the insurer. A standard home policy may not cover damage caused by guests or tenants.

03 Reporting a claim

Spanish law asks you to report damage within seven days of finding it. Take photos, keep receipts and ask a neighbour or key holder to report it for you if you are abroad.

04 Cancelling a policy

Policies renew automatically each year. To cancel, tell the insurer in writing at least one month before the renewal date.
